Instruction Manual
The Story So Far: In 2032, the first American colonies arrived on Mars, soon to be followed by many other countries seeking to gain an advantage in the fight for space dominance.

Ten years later, the first children on Earth were born with some psionic powers. By 2050, about one in twenty were born with some psionic ability.

2062 saw the beginning of the first world war to extend into space, as many countries were eager to try out their new space, AI and psionic capabilities against each other.

The war lasted for eight years before ending in a stalemate, with large sections of Earth, the Moon, and Mars ravaged from nuclear and laser weaponry.

After an uneasy truce was called, countries began pushing all their resources into technology designed to ease and sustain life. Bioengineering became the forefront of development and life became easy.

In 2083, a computer virus from an unknown source took over the world's information systems, putting the entire world offline while corrupting the AI and bioengineered resources. Society immediately degraded into different groups and tribes.

The military held land for the last bastions of civilizations while mutant and cannibal armies rose up and fought for dominance. Most of the world became inhabitable from the bioengineered mutants and corrupted robots that patrolled the land, killing any surviving humans.

Near the dawn of the year 3000, the military began to push forward, hoping to regain control of civilization. Two of those soldiers would engage in a much bigger fight that would extend far beyond any countries borders...
